

The Present Perfect Simple tense

Example: I have (haven't) lived	Have I lived?
You have (haven't) lived	Have you lived?
He/she/it has lived	Has he/she/it lived?
We have lived	Have we lived?
You have lived	Have you lived?
They have lived	Have they lived?

- The Present Perfect Simple tense is a present tense. We use it to describe situations that have a connection with the present, even if they are not actually happening now or if they started in the past.
- To make the PPS tense, we use have/has + the past participle: for example “have lived”, “have been”, “have worked”, “have drunk”. Be careful because there are lots of irregular past participles (drunk, seen, eaten, etc).
- Typical signal words that we use with the PPS tense are: “ever”, “since”, “just”, “already”, “not yet”, “so far”, “until now”. These are called “adverbs of unfinished time”.
- You cannot use the PPS tense with “adverbs of finished time”, for example “10 years ago”, “last week”, “yesterday” because these are past (and finished) but the present perfect tense is a present tense (and unfinished). In other words, you cannot say: “I have lived in Sweden 10 years ago”.
- There are many applications of the PPS tense, but these are the three most important ones.

1. When we are describing situations that have continued from some time in the past until now.....(unfinished situations) = How long have you...?

e.g. Mike has lived in Japan for 3 years.

She's been in love with Bill since 1984.

Where's your homework? Sorry, Eddie, I haven't finished it yet

2. When we talk about life experiences, things that have happened at some time in our lives (but we don't say when they happened) = Have you ever...?

e.g. We've been to London before.

Have you ever been to London?

I've never studied the present perfect simple. It's difficult.

3. When we can see a present result of a past action or event, or when we are reporting recent events. (very common in newspapers and business reports) = What has just happened?

e.g. Your hair looks different. Have you had a haircut?

Look, there's been an accident. The police are talking to the driver.

Oh dear, I've just missed the bus.